

Dear Park:

We have recently been reviewing the biographic function in the Agency and its relationship to the facilities maintained by the Department of State. Under NSCID 3 the Department of State with its responsibility for political, cultural, and social intelligence has found it necessary to establish a biographic register. Since the establishment of CIA this Agency has considered it necessary to develop its own biographic register in the same fields in order to meet its internal needs. As a result there has existed considerable duplication of effort between CIA and the State Department in the maintenance of biographic data on such personalities. In view of the limited resources available to intelligence activities it is my belief that such duplication should be eliminated.

50X1

This Agency proposes, therefore, that subject to financial arrangements to be worked out, and which are in keeping with both general Federal practice and specifically Section 6 (a), Public Law 110, we agree that the CIA will discontinue its review and processing and preparation of reports on personalities in the political, cultural, and social fields and depend on the State Department for such service.
